

TILING THE PLANE

GREGORY LIM

There exist only three regular polygons which tile the two-dimensional Euclidean plane: triangles, squares, and hexagons. (Convexity implies regularity.) Generally, for $3 \leq k \leq 6$, every convex k -gon tiles the plane, except “most” convex pentagons.